

JS ET AL.: NGC 5291

ity dispersion (second moment) map from the C+D combined array data. Contours are 10, 25, 30, 50, 75, and 100 sent in the complex south of knot B: to the f HI wraps steep density gradients close optical feature but tapers more gradually to r, we note that this sweeping to the west be true for the knots in the western arc

EINSTEIN image (Fig. 10) shows a source c the galaxy and possibly extended N–S along plexes and an apparent “tail” to the west, as r ciated with ablation by a westward flow. Th extent of the x-ray emission is approximately